

ΣΥΝΤΟΜΟ ΒΙΟΓΡΑΦΙΚΟ

Konstantinos PANTAKAS has completed the Greek Police Academy and the Department of Sociology at the University of the Aegean. His academic and research interests focus mainly on Migration Studies, the sociological approach to migration, criminology and the management of anthropogenic risks. He holds postgraduate studies in Migration Studies, focusing on the management of migration flows in Europe and Greece, and participates in the scientific research project “PREMARIS - Prevention and Management of Anthropogenic Risks: Organisational Preparedness and Interoperability in Local Communities - A Case Study”. At the same time, he has approximately fifteen years of professional experience in the field of law enforcement. Additionally, he has attended numerous CEPOL training seminars, as well as additional certifications related to criminology, psychology and cultural sociology.